NOW pickets over funding

Protest planned at Carl's Jr.

By ROBERTA ALEXANDER

EL CERRITO — It will be cheeseburgers with picket signs Saturday as a local women's group protests the financial contributions of a fast food chain.

"Our basic idea is that eating at Carl's Jr. is hazardous to women's health," said Jagi Asghedom, vice-president of the East Bay Chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW).

The restaurant at 11244 San Pablo Ave. will be the site of an educational rally on April 23 from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.; a simultaneous protest will be held by San Francisco NOW at the chain's Fisherman's Wharf locale.

The group is protesting the donation of over $25,000 by Carl Karcher and his company, Carl Karcher Enterprises, to organizations and candidates that oppose abortion, contraception, publicly-funded child care, lesbian rights and the Equal Rights Amendment. NOW supports these rights.

"This is a company whose owner donates a lot of money that is anti-reproductive choice," Asghedom explained. "Women should know what happens to the money they spend once it goes into the company coffers."

According to the company's public relations spokesperson, Mike Elliot, Carl Karcher Enterprises has indeed made donations to the National Right to Life Committee.

"We believe this is the right direction to go in," he said. "Carl Karcher himself has spoken out on this issue many times."

Elliot, speaking from the company's corporate headquarters in southern California, went on to explain that this corporate giving implied no curb on individual employee freedom; "we know that many people in the company may disagree with this," he said.

Albany may cut police, fire funds

By JUDY POLUMBAUM

ALBANY — In a significant shift in policy, the Albany City Council gave notice Monday that it will consider cutbacks in fire-fighting and police service later this year unless the city's financial outlook improves.

City Administrator William Haden projected that city expenditures for fiscal 1983-84 will fall $168,000 short of revenues. He told the council Monday that "general government" services have been pared to the limit by cutbacks since 1978, and public safety personnel is the only significant area left to cut.

Council members Henry Kruse and William Johns both agreed that the council must be willing to explore cuts in the fire and police department when it comes to budget-making this spring.

"We have to give a serious look at hitherto untouchable items, even safety services," Kruse said.

"I don't see how we can avoid it," said Johns.

Their comments came during a council discussion on priorities for the next fiscal year, intended to give guidance to staff in drawing up a proposed 1983-84 budget.

The prospect of public safety cuts prompted a plea from local realtor Jerome Blank, a former council member, who suggested the council

Creating for TV is making magic

Producer loves art of his craft

By ARLENE EAGAN

KENSINGTON — Television isn't just entertainment for producer Don Ferguson of Kensington. He says it's an art medium that "is a fluid way of recreating the world."

"It's a picture that moves and speaks, it's not just there," Ferguson said. "It gives me a feeling of magic. There's something to being able to so literally recreate the world, even though it's on so small a box."

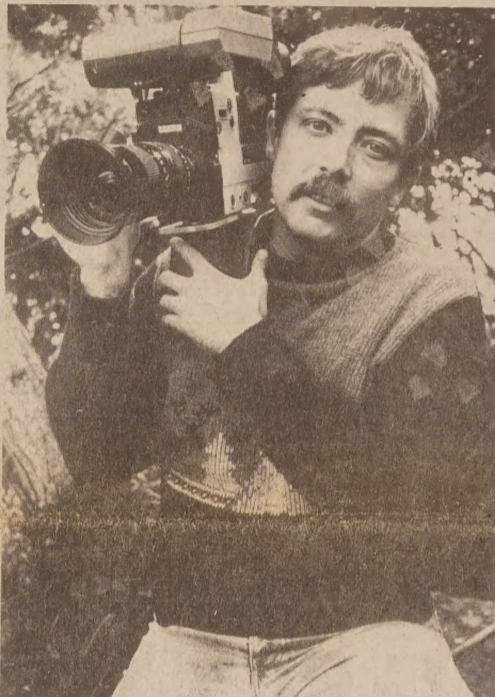

"But it's only a matter of time before video comes up with a screen the size of a movie screen," he said. Ferguson, 36, has been working with video locally for the past two and a half years. He completed one semester in the video department at the California College of Arts and Crafts in Oakland, but he says he gained most of his experience on the job.

Most of his learning was self-taught from equipment and textbooks, and about half of his time has been spent learning the technological aspects of production. He started out working on a production crew with Televents in El Cerrito to gain his experience "in bits and pieces."

Ferguson previously worked with various art media, including ceramics, wood, stone and silver.

When he was younger he was more interested in "cerebral things, like philosophy. I did a master's degree in

Video fair set for this weekend

Producer Don Ferguson of Kensington will be videotaping the East Bay's first video and computer flea market and fair, which will be held in Berkeley this week.

Ferguson is recording the event for a tape he is doing about the East Bay Media Center (EBMC), the sponsors of the flea market. Flea market coordinator Andrea Torrice said she is expecting 200-500 people to attend.

The video and computer flea market will be on April 23 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at General Electronics Systems, Inc., 1440 San Pablo Ave., Berkeley. Donation is $3. (For more information, call East Bay Media Center at 843-3699.)

"The flea market was initiated by members of EBMC who felt the marriage of computer and video technology was closing fast," Torrice said. "The community should be informed."

Torrice said that video graphics are an up-and-coming field combining the two technologies. She explained that the video camera records an image, then the computer is programmed to generate graphics on top of the image.

EBMC has organized several workshops and demonstrations for the fair, including a demonstration of how to edit videotape by computer

Consensus politics in Albany

By WILLIAM F. JOHNS
City Council Member

ALBANY — Several years ago, Albany's City Council members pledged to work together to eliminate the reputation of Monday night City Council meetings as being "the best show in town," admission free, where the public could view their elected officials exchanging fiery insults.

Many people shared the hope that council meetings would evolve into a forum for public debate, where opposing viewpoints could be discussed in an atmosphere of mutual respect. However, the currently dominant political process is something very different; often referred to as

Early P.E. decision postponed

By DON McCORMACK

A group of parents that wants to pay to stretch the school day at Portola Junior High School in El Cerrito got a lukewarm reception from the Richmond Unified school board last week.

The board delayed a vote on the parents' proposal to sponsor an early morning physical education class in the fall, freeing students to take another elective class during the day.

But board member Don Lau said he was against the plan and board member Eddis Harrison said she saw legal difficulties. Superintendent Richard Lovette, however, said the district's lawyer indicated the plan, if modified, would be legally acceptable.

Leaning toward the proposal, Trustee Frank Calton said, exasperated, "If we had to make everything perfectly legal and 100 percent correct, we would never do anything."

Junior high students are required to take physical education. Short of money, the district last year lopped the school day at junior highs from six periods to five. By taking P.E. early, the students would have time for another class.

"We have children right now who are losing part of their education," said Sonya Gross, a Portola parent, criticizing the five-period day.

The parents originally wanted to charge $155 for a class of 40 students and limit admissions to A or B students or those recommended by teachers. When the district's lawyer said it would be illegal to restrict admissions, the parents dropped the scholastic requirements and offered four scholarships for students who could not afford the fee. Enrollment, if excessive, would be determined by lottery.

Billy Ball may take a run for the roses

First, it's the Cal Derby

By STEVE TADY

Commuters creeping along Highway 17 are constantly reminded of Lewis Figone's favorite subject.

"Billy Ball is back" flashes the huge sign adjacent to Golden Gate Fields. "He runs, April 23 in Cal Derby," continues the message board.

Figone, who lives in El Cerrito, has come a long way from his days of dealing with that city's garbage.

Being co-owner of the now famous three-year-old gray colt may take him a long way from the Albany track also. He may end up in Churchill Downs, watching Billy Ball take a run for the roses at the Kentucky Derby.

Figone now owns Bay Cities Refuse Service, a garbage company that serves Kensington and Sausalito from the Part Boulevard headquarters in San Pablo. He was always interested in the race track and followed the horses closely after getting off work in the early afternoon.

He currently arrives at his job at 4:30 a.m. and leaves around 1 p.m., going directly to Golden Gate Fields to check on Billy Ball. He and Rich Granzella, owner of Richmond Sanitation, are 50-50 owners of the horse.

Last Wednesday, Figone went to watch his gray colt go through a full workout in preparation for Saturday's 65th running of the $175,000 California Derby. Between the second and third races of Wednesday's program, the track announcer asked for everyone's attention.

Billy Ball took center stage for his workout and the fans loved it. Kids screamed out "Billy Ball" while adults pointed and gawked. The undefeated horse has become a Bay Area sports hero.

Regular jockey J.R. Anderson guided Billy Ball through the Cal Derby distance of a mile and an eighth and finished in 1:53.3.

The crowd buzzed at the sight of Billy Ball's powerful strides.

Horsing racing fans cheer on Billy Ball

Trainer Ross Brinson watched closely and was pleased with the brisk romp.

"J.R. said he wasn't getting tired. He had a good run on a slow track today. We figure to have one more good workout before the Derby. We'll make it just like the race," Brinson said.

The amazing thing about Billy Ball is what Brinson describes as a "million dollar personality." While he is washed down and his front legs wrapped in cold cloth, Billy Ball appears totally relaxed.

"He is so calm. Nothing ever bothers him," Figone said. "Ninety percent of a good horse is the disposition and he has a great one."

Billy Ball's first race was also a great one. It was Jan. 29 and when the gates opened, Billy Ball was left at the post on a muddy track. "I've never seen a horse make up so much ground on a muddy track. He must have come from 14 or 15 lengths back and he won by three lengths."

He won again at the Golden Bear Stakes on Feb. 8 and added victories on Feb. 24 and April 2 in tuning up for the Cal Derby.

While Billy Ball is calm, the man he was named for is usually not, especially when his New York Yankees aren't on the long end of a score.

"I grew up with Billy Martin and we're good friends. He came to see the first race. I've always wanted to name a horse after him," Figone said.

"Billy is a great guy unless you get sarcastic with him or give him a bad time. Then you better look out."

Figone bought his first horse in 1958 (Frau), which won the first two races it entered. But Figone learned quickly about racing when he raced Frau a little too hard and a little early. "I didn't really know what I was doing. I didn't listen to the trainer at all," he recalled.

He lost Frau in a claiming race and eventually bought Billy Ball's mom, Rukann. Rukann sired Billy Ball by Shady Fellow and the rest could soon be horse racing history.

It almost didn't include Figone, though. "I was getting a little disgusted with racing (Figone had lost a couple of quality horses to health problems and wasn't sure if he wanted to keep it up). We put him up for auction at the Cow Palace and was asking $22,500 but the highest bid was $19,500. We almost lost him," he said.

Billy Ball has to win the Cal Derby in order for Figone to send him to the Kentucky Derby. "We might try the Preakness if we don't win the Cal Derby, but we have to win to go to the Kentucky Derby," he said.

Billy Ball has won $66,000 and Rukann, now 12 years old, is commanding excellent breeder fees back in Kentucky.

Figone goes to the track every day to check on his beloved horse. He is like a nervous mother when around him. "You never know what can happen," he said. "I go every day because I want to make sure everything is going well."

Carl's Jr. site of protest

"We need to step forward and make decisions," he said, calling it "the great American tradition."

NOW also cited the company for its donations to the National Stop OSHA (Occupational Safety and Health Administration) Committee, controversial southern California legislator John Briggs, Yes on 9 (the Peripheral Canal), Californians for Judicial Reform and the Mike Curb Committee.

Elliot responded that the company's donations to the Stop OSHA campaign were not based on a disregard for maintaining a safe workplace, but rather as a protest against excessive and conflicting rules.

"We, along with many businesses, have been concerned about the conflicting interpretations of countless rules," he said. He mentioned as an example a rule requiring a worker to wear earplugs as protection against noise, and another requiring workers to be able to hear warning bells.

"Our corporate philanthropy is far and above the average. It's both extensive and generous," he said.

Elliot said the company donates money to youth and health organizations. "We believe we have to return to the community some of what we draw out. We believe we are responsible for contributing to the civic well-being of a community."

Specifically, he noted that the company donated to the United Way in every community in which there is a Carl's Jr. restaurant.

The fast food chain has been involved in controversy elsewhere in the East Bay, as the company attempts to open a store at 2560 Bancroft Way in Berkeley. Protests have centered both on the company's politics as well as on neighborhood objections to a fast food emporium in its midst. The matter was referred to the Berkeley City Council, which plans a public hearing on the issue.

Recreating the world for T

philosophy and systematic theology. Don't ask me why."

His recent interest in electronics stems from a fascination with the "primal kind of material energy" of the electron.

"A good analogy is a painter," he said. "He uses canvas, brushes and paints. A video producer composes with electronics. I see connections between the physics of it and the result that is produced."

"TV changes reality," he said. "Something happens between the process of recording it and actually seeing it. I've seen it especially with mainstream network news, and with the Vietnam war coverage. Before TV, bringing that immediate of an experience to you was unthinkable."

Before he began working with video, Ferguson wrote a script for a satire about TV called "Videophilia." It turned out to be rather elaborate and too expensive to produce, but it started him on his career in television.

"I began to think about the effect of TV on children and the effects on the first TV generation," he said.

"I like TV because it's the most powerful media in terms of reaching people. But to a large extent TV is frustrating. You can forget about the networks...their motive is profit. And cable TV isn't much better."

However, Ferguson said he's pleased with the progress he has made in video.

"As a producer I'm able to incorporate everything I've ever done," he said. "The producer has to know how to do everything — the script, lighting, directing, organizing and dealing with people."

"A lot of it is mundane," he said. "Paperwork and legwork. You've got to wade through all that, and still stay interested. You've got to keep some sense of organization, and at the same time stay excited about the creative aspects. And there are larger elements, like the sets, the actors, and the scripts."

He's currently producing a short videotape called "Pocket Organizer," a satire featuring Bob Ernst of the local theater group, the Blake St. Hawkeyes. Ferguson is using his own money for the production.

"There's little chance of selling it," he said. "And no one ever makes his production costs back, unless you get something like a 'sitcom' accepted by the networks."

"It's done to get exposure," he said. "People want to see what you've done. The average person's access to television (production) is very limited," he said.

Ferguson said organizations like the East Bay Media Center (EBMC) in Berkeley have been helping new video artists interested in more experience. He is now taping a documentary — "an informational tape" — for EBMC.

He would like to do some national videotapes for museums in recording studios, and tapes for individuals, including dance documentation and press kits.

"I do 'your baby's first' sort of thing," he said. "You have a job to get a job. You start out small."

and a presentation about the titled "What is communication?"

The flea market will have video aficionados a chance to sell and swap equipment and about the latest technology and computer consultants available to give advice on design a system.

"They'll show how a video system, what to look for, how not to get ripped off," said.

Parents want an early P.E. class

mond, the teachers' union, said the program violated the education code because it was a private course offered in a public institution.

"Deficiencies are going to have to be remedied but they are going to have to be remedied for all students, not just those who can afford it," said

Ciarrocchi. Several other people also called the plan "elitist."

Supporters, some shaking their heads in disbelief, argued that if it was elitist to want a good education for their children, then they were elitist.

"The main point is that the board should not deprive any student of a good education," said parent Barraza.

Lau said he was concerned about equality. Harrison said it might string the issue through the courts for a year.

The board is scheduled to discuss the issue again tonight.

"consensus politics."

Consensus politics, as practiced in Albany, has the following three elements:

- Extensive "lobbying" among council members before the public meeting (usually on a one-to-one basis, although there have been exceptions). In this manner, the losers know they have lost before the meeting and at the council meeting they usually look for concessions from the majority on peripheral points rather than debating the principal issues.

- A willingness of the majority to make extensive amendments on peripheral points in order to accommodate the losers and obtain the consensus necessary for a 5-0 vote. (The one notable exception to this is the recently enacted civil service ordinance, where the majority refused to even correct obvious grammatical errors pointed out by a member of the public.)

- A large number of social contacts among council members and others active on the political scene. This results in a situation where a council member votes against the majority on an important issue out of social ostracism, in the appropriate degree.

The Effects of Consensus Politics

- There is an absence of public debate on many issues. In recent months, members of the public have caused the council of "bais," largely through consensus politics often leads to the appearance of council meetings are orchestrated.

- Violation of the spirit of the Brown Act.
- A council member who refuses to participate in lobbying and social contacts finds himself increasingly out of the real decision-making process and subject to social insults.

- The extensive compromising necessary to obtain consensus results in the absence of any clear-cut decisions in council actions. In short, there is an absence of leadership by a council majority.

Conclusion: I believe that the Albany City Council badly needs a change in direction. To establish a deep politeness is not a substitute for honesty or honest respect for opposing viewpoints that is necessary to foster the desired public debate.

The opposition should publicly and respectfully state its viewpoint on the given issue. The majority (with an open mind) should state its reasons for rejecting opposition arguments and (without public or private permit the opposition to vote "no." By moving in this direction, the Albany City Council could provide leadership.

Public awareness of the reasoning behind council decisions is often more important than public participation in the ultimate decision. The council has an obligation to provide public access to its decision-making process in this way can the public be assured that the council behind council decision-making is based on public interest rather than on the search for political power, individual ego gratification, or other motives.

Crestmont School plans its authors' night

Crestmont School will hold its 11th annual authors' night and book sale on Saturday, April 23, 7:30 p.m. at the school, 6226 Arlington Blvd., Richmond.

Bay Area authors will be present to talk about their books; new and used books will be sold at low prices; and wine and food will be served. Tickets for the evening make the purchaser eligible for door prizes.

Berkeley author Bernie Zilbergeld will talk about his new book "The Shrinking of America: Myths of Psychological Change." In this book, he discusses the American obsession with personal change and psychotherapy.

A second featured book will be the work of Lyn Reese, Jean Wilkinson and Phyllis Sheon Koppelman, entitled "I'm on my way running: women speak on coming of age."

The book is a compilation of stories, journal articles, poems and songs that celebrate the passage from girlhood to womanhood. The three editors helped to develop the women's studies program in the Berkeley Unified School District and each has written or coedited other books.

Frank Harris, whose book, "Games," is now in its 5th printing, will discuss the book and give a demonstration. He has been a member of the Eastern Cooperative School for 26 years.

Rounding out the evening will be poet David Meltzer. His credits include "Tens: Selected Poems," "Two Way Mirror: A Poetry Notebook" and "Birth."

Door prizes include a hand-sewn quilt made by the children, parents and teachers of the school, along with gifts and certificates from the Hotel Mac restaurant, Hs. Lordships, Park Place Restaurant, Ben Franklin Books, Funny Farms, an attorney, nursery and others. Tickets stubs are also good for $2 off pizza at Round Table Pizza.

Tickets are on sale at Ben Franklin Books, 1361 Solano Ave., Albany and 1600 Shattuck Ave., Berkeley, and can be obtained by calling the school at 237-4164. A donation of $1 in advance or $1.50 at the door is requested.

Is gifted program elitist? RUSD permits students to pick their schools

By DON MCCORMACK

The Richmond Unified School Board has again revised its program for highly intelligent junior high students, allowing them to attend the schools of their choice.

Voting 3-1, the board last week dropped its plan, adopted last month, to cluster gifted students at Portola, Crespi and Adams Junior Highs and curtail or drop gifted programs at Helms, Downer and Pinole Junior High schools. Previously, students were required to attend neighborhood schools.

The effects of open enrollment, however, may bring the same results as clustering: a shift of gifted students to Portola, Crespi and Adams, a decline of the program in the remaining schools. The board will review enrollments in May to see if an exodus develops.

The board was accused of elitism for making the revision and implored to let the children get the best education possible.

"Does equal opportunity require holding back the most able students," asked parent Ann Holmquist, who said she favored more clustering of the highly intelligent.

Gail Vaughn, who favored keeping gifted programs intact at all junior highs, asked, "Would it not be better to put effort into improving these schools... rather than disrupting the high achievers and gifted children...?"

About 10 percent of students in the Richmond Unified School District are classified as "gifted." About 90 percent of these students have taken tests indicating they have IQs of 132 and above and the rest, in some way, have demonstrated high intelligence, said Hal Magarian head of the gifted program.

These students now are clustered at certain schools: Portola in El Cerrito has 183; Crespi in El Sobrante, 225; Adams in the Richmond hills, 143. Pinole Junior High has 75, Downer in Richmond, 62, and Helms in San Pablo, 45, according to district statistics.

Richmond Unified assigns students to their schools, using residency as a guide. Exceptions are made for racial balance and for babysitter convenience — and, now, intelligence. When the board last month agreed to more clustering, parents and teachers from Helms, Pinole and Downer junior highs protested that if these schools lost gifted students, they might not be able to justify a gifted program.

Helms Principal John Scharetz said he was optimistic Helms gifted students would stay with the school but if a sizeable number left, the school might have to curtail algebra, computer instruction and advanced math and history.

On the other side, some parents whose children are assigned to the smaller schools want them to attend the larger because these schools, having more students, are able to offer more courses. Assistant Superintendent Pat Rupley confirmed Wednesday that the larger junior highs do offer more classes and more variety.

Only Adams and Portola, for example, have advanced science, she said.

The audience of about 100 seemed evenly divided between those who wanted to beef up or protect the smaller schools and those who favored clustering or free choice.

Trustee Don Lau opened his remarks by saying, "We can't be all things to everyone."

Frank Calton, who joined Lau and Katherine Lord in voting for open enrollment, said if the district had the money each school would have a full program.

Strapped for funds, the district has cut a period from the junior high school. Trustees on several occasions have said that the district can no longer afford comprehensive programs — a mainstay of American education — at each junior high school.

Trustee Eddis Harrison, who has favored closing schools to cluster students, said this was not the appropriate time for open enrollment of the gifted. Trustee Goy Fuller was absent.

Superintendent Richard Lovette said gifted transfers would be turned down if space at the receiving school was lacking and if racial goals were compromised. The district encourages minority students to transfer to mainly white schools and vice versa.

City mulls public safety cuts

hold a tax election offering voters the chance to maintain the present level of staffing.

"I think you at least have the opportunity, in fact, the obligation, to ask the citizens what they want," said Haden. "Someone realizes the city's a terrible spot, and we either pay for the services or we don't get them."

Pamela Kon, another Albany resident, agreed that despite general antagonism toward higher taxes, voters might be willing to pass an increase by the required two-thirds majority if they realized their police and fire-fighting services were on the line.

But Kon pointed out a "logistical problem" — the fact that the budget must be fixed by June and the next election is not until November.

Kruse noted that there is not enough time to hold a special election, which would be costly in any case.

Haden said the projected shortfall for 1983-84 puts the city in "a very defensive position." He said his calculations are predicated on the assumption that the state will not make further cutbacks in transfers to localities, adding that more state cuts will make the local financial picture even worse.

Technically, the city is not allowed to run a deficit, Haden said. If revenues did not cover expenses, the city would have to borrow against anticipation of future taxes, and part of the subsequent year's budget would have to go toward paying off the loan.

Chuck E. Cheese: no appeals filed yet

EL CERRITO — The question of an appeal of the Planning Commission's approval of a use permit for a Chuck E. Cheese Pizza Time Theatre at the El Cerrito Plaza remains up in the air.

Thursday is the deadline for such an appeal, and as of Friday morning, none had materialized.

Community Services director Jean Smith said Monday night she was surprised on two counts.

She said she expected an appeal from Kirby's restaurant owner David Viale, whose business stands to be replaced by Chuck E. Cheese, and also thought Pizza Time might appeal, since the Planning Commission approval carried a number of restrictions.

An appeal would put the matter of the use permit before the City Council for decision.

Kindergarten registrations slated

ALBANY — The Albany Unified School District will register children for kindergarten in the fall of 1983 on Tuesday, May 3, from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

Children may be registered at Vista, Cornell or Marin schools. However, all University Village children are to be registered at the Albany Children's Center, which will be open until 5:30 p.m.

Parents must bring the child's birth certificate or other proof of birth and be prepared to fill out health forms concerning vaccinations, immunizations, and childhood diseases.

Verification of the dates of immunizations for polio, measles (rubeola), DPT, mumps and rubella (German measles) for each kindergarten child is required. No child can unconditionally enter kindergarten next fall without immunizations. School nurses will be present to assist parents and to check medical information.

Crime poster winners set

EL CERRITO — The El Cerrito Citizens' Crime Prevention Committee will award cash prizes to the winners of its annual poster contest at the El Cerrito police station on Saturday, April 23, at noon.

The posters, the handwork of local schoolchildren, will be on display at the station during the day from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Committee members also will be there to provide information of the police and fire departments.

Meals for one or two

Cooking for one or two does present some problems unless planning takes place. That is, unless you wish to fall into the cottage cheese-fruit-tea-and peanut butter syndrome, you must think ahead. After all, for whatever reason you are cooking for one or two instead of a houseful, you are one of the diners and you deserve the best. So plan for it.

This is the premise of my presentations to groups of older singles, but it should hold true for anyone. Sometimes a reminder is in order to point out that there is a reason to plan attractive and nourishing meals whether you are no longer cooking for a family or just starting on your own or newly married. Of course, there's nothing wrong with cottage cheese, etc. It's just that you deserve more exciting meals.

At the older end of the scale, we may have the time, but not the energy or desire to spend time in the kitchen. At the beginning end, young people have the energy and interest but not enough time to fit in shopping and cooking after school or after working all day. Cooking for one or two can still be creative without being too demanding. By cooking enough to use for several meals during one stint in the kitchen, we can plan interesting variations of one food.

One-two-three cooking

For instance, using one chicken for two, three different ways can produce chicken soup and salad for one meal, stuffed chicken legs for another, and curried chicken breasts on rice for another. (You may remember these from previous columns.)

How about hamburger? Prepare enough meatballs from two pounds of ground beef, divide the into four portions and freeze the unused portions for a variety of dishes. Here's a "for instance:"

Basic meatballs

2 lbs. ground beef
3 slices of bread, crumbled (or use 1 c. oatmeal)

½ c. milk
1 minced onion
2 eggs
1 t. salt

Combine all ingredients and mix well. Shape into 48 small meatballs, about 1 inch in diameter. Place in a baking sheet with low sides and brown in 375-degree oven for 25 to 30 minutes. Don't overcook. Divide into four portions and wrap them separately for freezing. Serve the first batch in barbecue sauce.

Barbecued meatballs

½ cup catsup
2 T. butter
2 T. honey
1 T. vinegar
2 T. water

Combine and simmer uncovered for 15 minutes to develop flavor and to reduce and thicken a bit. Add one package of the meatballs and heat thoroughly. Serve over English muffins or half a crusty French roll with some raw vegetables. End up with fruit and cheese.

Want to serve by candlelight? (Why not!) Make:

Meatball stroganoff

1. Sauté a small amount of minced onion in 2 T. butter.
  2. Stir in 1 T. flour and cook for a few moments. Then add ¾ c. strong bouillon or soup stock. Blend and stir smooth.
  3. Add 1 T. sherry and 1 T. catsup and bring to a gentle bubble, stirring constantly.
  4. Add a portion of the meatballs (could still be frozen) and cook together over low heat about 10 minutes.
  5. Stir in ¼ c. sour cream and reheat but do not boil. Serve over hot cooked noodles.
- This version served with a few stalks of steamed asparagus, a lettuce wedge with your favorite dressing, and a scoop of sherbet makes a pretty and special meal.

Want a "zippy" flavor for another batch of meatballs? Let's go German with:

Sauerbraten sauce

½ c. water
1 beef bouillon cube (or 1 t. powdered bouillon)
3 T. brown sugar
2 T. raisins
2 T. lemon juice
¼ c. crushed gingersnaps

Dissolve bouillon in water and bring to boil. Add remaining ingredients and stir and cook long enough to blend the gingersnaps smoothly. Add meatballs and cook, covered, over low heat about 15 minutes. Serve over fluffy hot rice.

Complete this meal with some lightly steamed, shredded cabbage and a fruited gelatin salad. Have some chocolate cake for dessert. Wonderbar!

In a hurry? Use up your last batch of meatballs in:

Quickie spaghetti

Saute:
2 T. chopped onion
2 T. chopped green pepper
2 T. grated carrot
2 T. grated celery

Add:
1 small can (1 c.) tomatoes, cut up
½ c. tomato sauce
Chopped mushrooms (canned or fresh, sliced)
1 t. brown sugar
Pinch of oregano, basil and garlic salt

Add the meatballs to the mixture and simmer uncovered for 20 to 30 minutes while you cook some spaghetti. Serve with plenty of grated Parmesan cheese. Have some green salad, several bread sticks, a glass of red wine and some fresh fruit with a slice of angel cake. Now that's Italian!

Mushroom report

During a presentation last week, someone asked me about the nutritional value of mushrooms. One cup of sliced, fresh mushrooms contains only 20 calories but plenty of fiber and B vitamins. They are low in sodium but high in potassium and are a good source of trace minerals, calcium and phosphorus.

Just a few mushrooms go a long way: 3 ounces will slice up to 1 cup. Whether you use them raw or in a sauce, they are an elegant and tasty addition to any recipe, as well as nutritious.

Let's clean up

Well whatta you know; Spring is here! I'd say means it's time for another community clean-up of an unsightly area.

This time let's try to clean the planted area of Marin Avenue from San Pablo west to the overpass. Hours work or less should complete the job. So let's meet 9 a.m., Saturday, April 23 at the corner of Marin and Pablo.

Come prepared for the sun by spreading a sun lotion on your face and arms and wear a hat. Also, if you carry gloves, a sharp stick to spear debris and garbage can liners.

Mark your calendar for the 23rd and I'll see you there. Thanks.

Telling stories for television: some tall tales

By PATRICK KEEFFE

KENSINGTON — Stanley Greenberg is a storyteller, but instead of telling his tales around a campfire or at a child's bedside, he tells them on film.

He's been doing that successfully for 23 years. The work of the 55-year-old Kensington resident has been critically acclaimed as some of the best dramatic and historical writing for television.

"When you call yourself a storyteller, you join a tradition that goes back to the first stirrings of man," Greenberg said. "Stories tell the meaning of life."

He likes to tell stories about "great people working against great odds, important stories, elevating stories that give us hope."

Three "great stories" have been told again in just the past week, he said. The modern one is about Martin Luther King and the 15th anniversary of his assassination.

"He's not just facts anymore, he's a story," Greenberg said. "And his story has evolved into something quite different from 15 years ago. I've watched the news stories in the past few days and they don't show the same speech anymore."

"Ten years ago they would have showed the 'I have a dream' speech, about the day when black kids and white kids would go to school together. It was optimistic. Now they show the speech he made the night before he was killed, when he compared himself to Moses. He said he may not live to see the culmination of his dream, but that he had seen the promised land. The story is much more pessimistic today."

Greenberg's second story was of Easter, which he said is actually five stories.

"Which one did most people commemorate? There's Matthew's story and Mark and Luke and John. None of those. Most people celebrated the fifth one, the one in their hearts — an amalgam of all the others and their own faith."

"Last week, my people celebrated Passover, which started 3,300 years ago. It's the story of the Jewish people enslaved in Egypt and how they left and crossed the Red Sea, with Chuck Heston in the lead. It's a story that has been told slightly differently in each family. It's the story of freedom."

Greenberg said he is fascinated by the way myths recur in history and that the first story that was actually written down — the ancient tale of Gilgamesh, by the Sumerians, who invented writing.

Gilgamesh, an old Sumerian king who was near death, was floating in his canoe down the river towards his city. "But poor Gilgamesh never gets there, he just gets a last glimpse of it, like Moses and Martin Luther King."

Greenberg didn't start his screenwriting career until 1961. Until that time he was the midwestern director for the Chicago-based American Zionist Council, which promoted closer ties between the American Jewish community and Israel.

One day he read an article about a television producer who was seeking writers for a show about lawyers — "The Defenders." He wrote a script over the weekend and sent it in. Three days later, the producer asked for more.

"I liked the show a lot," he recalled. "It was about an old lawyer and a young lawyer and they dealt with cases where there was a moral or ethical principle at stake: how far freedom of speech go? Did people have a right to be communists or fascists? The right to have an abortion? Things that weren't discussed very much in those days, particularly on television."

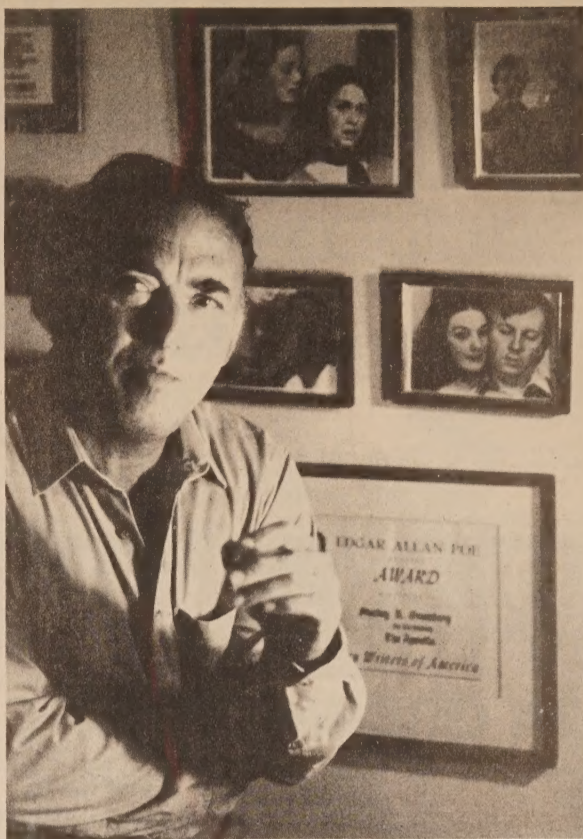

He wrote for another series in the 1960s called "East Side, West Side," which starred George C. Scott as a social worker in New York City. "I was writing about issues I thought were very important. That's real storytelling."

Another thing he likes about his craft is being able to "tell the truth about history."

"History is so opposite from what we learned in school," he said. "My kids were reading about the settling of California for a history class. So I took them to visit a mission. The woman there told us that the Indians lived there and planted crops and everybody lived happily."

"I asked, 'where are the Indians?' and she pointed to the cemetery. Not a single kid in California learns that we killed the Indians. Once I discovered the truth about history and found I could combine it with storytelling, I could tell a good story that was true."

In the 1960s, Greenberg also wrote scripts for "The

Stanley Greenberg

Naked City," "Route 66," "The Nurses," and "The Dupont Show of Shows."

In the early 1970s, he wrote a play called "Pueblo," about the capture of an American naval spy ship by the North Koreans. When the ship's commander and his 103 men were released from prison and returned to the U.S., "they were promptly put on trial for violating the code of military conduct — they abandoned their ship without a fight."

"People loved the play, so we did it for TV and I concluded that the world wanted me to write history. The world being ABC, NBC and CBS."

Greenberg also wrote "The Missiles of October," about the late President Kennedy and the Cuban missile crisis; "The Silence," about a West Point cheating scandal; the mini-series "Blind Ambition," based on John Dean's book about the Nixon White House; and in the past few years, "FDR: The Last Year;" and "The Day the Bubble Burst," about the 1929 stock market crash. He also wrote two feature films, "Skyjacked" and "Soylent Green."

Some people ask him why he wrote a film about the final year of Franklin D. Roosevelt's life.

"He was a man of enormous power, confronting the end of the war in Europe, the birth of the United Nations, the growth of Soviet expansionism and fighting with death itself. Everything in the play is true, and it's also a great story. One man against the implacable forces of history."

He wrote about the Cuban missile crisis for the same reason:

"Kennedy and Khrushchev held the fate of the world in their hands. We were on the edge of a nuclear war."

"We're on the edge of a nuclear war now and if I didn't have writer's block, I'd be writing that story right now. Why isn't somebody writing that story today?"

TV and video games:

An El Cerrito teenager takes on 'Starcade'

By SAMANTHA STEVENS

EL CERRITO — Lights flashed. Eerie sounds filled the air. Over blips, crashes and bangs, wafted the voice of Star Trek's Mr. Spock "Welcome aboard, Captain," he said, sounding strangely electronic.

Amidst the commotion, 16-year-old John Lowry of El Cerrito smiled and rubbed his hands together. Then he turned and began hitting the buttons of a control panel.

Lowry, a junior at Salesian High School, was not preparing to blast off into space on the Starship Enterprise. But he was about to embark on an adventure that would require every bit of his four years of training.

Lowry was competing on Starcade, an electronic marriage of television and video games. He was one of eight contestants on four shows that were taped recently at Bridgeway Studios in San Francisco.

The voice of Spock echoing through the studio came from the arcade version of "Star Trek," which Lowry had selected as the first game he would play against his opponent, Sara Conrad, a 39-year-old Fremont pharmacist and mother.

"I've been playing video games since I was 12," said Lowry. "I saw Starcade on television one day when I was home sick from school, and I said, 'This is a piece of cake.'"

Lowry, a member of Salesian's tennis team, said he had become a contestant because, "I like to compete, I like to play, and I like to win."

But moments before the cameras rolled, he shurged and admitted being "a little nervous." "I'm just taking it in stride. I'm really here to have fun."

Lowry and Conrad competed on half-hour show by answering question about, and playing, video games. The contestant with the highest score after four rounds, plays one more round to garner points for the grand prize, a $2,000 Wacko game.

Sarcade host March Richards asked the first question: "Bump and Jump is a game about...?"

Lowry snapped: "Cars!"

Right! Lowry chose the first game — "Star Trek." The cheering studio audience of about 40 included his mother Barbara Lowry and step-father Bob Bacon. But Lowry slipped behind, losing to Conrad 8,575 to 2,250.

After the cameras turned off, he turned to the audience: "I feel horrible."

Lowry came back in the second round, playing Millipede, with 12,243 points to Conrad's 6,124. But a tally of both rounds showed he still trailed by 206 points.

Conrad won rounds three and four — and by the end of the show she had won a $900 home computer and a $400 motor-cross bike.

Lowry, trying to conceal his disappointment, said, "I don't know what happened in that first game."

"The only thing that helps is practicing."

He admitted he hadn't practiced very much the week before the show, no more than the few hours a week he plays at the Fantasia video arcade in El Cerrito Plaza. He usually spends about $3 each time he goes. He also plays his parents on his home computer system.

Although video games have recently been installed at Salesian High, Lowry said he doesn't play at the school.

"They're too outdated," he said.

Lowry didn't come away from Starcade empty-handed. Although the gleaming "WACKO" eluded him, his $150 in consolation prizes included a desk-top calculator, a "joystick," and a year's subscription to "Electronic Fun Magazine."

But "WACKO" is what he wants; he's going to reapply to the show.

"Next time I'll know what to do." He grins.

"I shall return."

No broadcast date has been set for the starcade show featuring Lowry, but it will be aired between the end of March and the beginning of June.

The show is televised via Atlanta Super Station WTBS (Cable Channel 17) on Mondays at 2:30 p.m. bridge columns. Sumner always makes himself the victim of brilliant play or defense.

Sitting West, he opened the queen of spades against a three no-trump contract. South was one of Sumner's advanced pupils who used Sumner's teaching against him.

The pupil won the first spade and led back a low diamond. Sumner ducked, but won the diamond continuation and cleared the spade suit by leading the jack.

Declarer won and cashed his last two diamonds. Sumner had to discard on the last diamond. A spade discard would allow South to play ace and another heart to set up a heart as his ninth trick. Sumner knew that his pupil had 25 or 26 high card points for the three no-trump call, which left just a chance that East might hold the club jack. So Sumner dropped a low club. Now declarer took his A-K of clubs and finally threw Sumner in with a spade.

Sumner took his three spades, but had to give declarer the last two tricks with the A-Q of hearts.
